

Pronouns Usage Quick Guide

Pronouns are words that can replace nouns. Nouns refer to people, places, or things.

Personal pronouns are pronouns that refer to a person.

Commonly Used Pronouns

She/Her/Hers/Herself

He/Him/His/Himself

They/Them/Their/Theirs/Themselves

Don't use "preferred pronouns". This term is misleading because it implies that a trans, nonbinary, or gender diverse person's pronouns are just a preference and that it might be acceptable to use other pronouns for them.

Using the correct pronouns for people is like using the correct name: it's a basic signal of respect.

Using Singular They/Them

► "Alex left their jacket on the table."

People who use they/them pronouns are still referred to in the singular:

► "Alex isn't cold, so they left their jacket on the table."

It would be incorrect to say,

✗ "Alex aren't cold, so they left their jacket on the table."

However, verbs following they/them pronouns take the plural form:

► "Alex just went outside. They aren't cold, so they left their jacket on the table."

Practical Tips

- 1 Introduce yourself with your pronouns in addition to your name.
- 2 Don't assume a person's pronouns based on their appearance.
- 3 If you don't know someone's pronouns ask them before you refer to them.
- 4 Don't ask only those whose gender expression is unexpected to you for their pronouns.
- 5 If you accidentally use the wrong pronoun for someone, simply correct yourself and commit to getting it right next time.
- 6 If you notice someone has used the wrong pronoun for another person, correct them.
- 7 Keep in mind that some people use different pronouns in different settings.
- 8 Practice!
